Employment Assistance for Veterans - Once a service member separates from the military, they are walking away, not only from a job but a whole very structured lifestyle. They need to adapt to the civilian world and it's not always easy. Quite often, their spouse experiences the same difficulty because they either have had to continuously change jobs due to military relocation or they just remained out of the job market and now they must reenter it. Regardless of why, the veteran and/or their spouse must adapt to the current market.

Consider working with local employers to host a job fair or job skills seminar for your local veterans and their spouses. It's vital they see that we stand ready to assist them!
